

Edwin Loxley's Shaker style kitchen has classic charm.

Feature by Kate Philbin
Photography by Darren Chung

house on the hill

Discover how sympathetic design and picturesque views make this grand Cotswold home the ultimate country dwelling.

If there was ever a property with breathtaking surroundings, this is it. Nestled on the Upper Brailes hills in three acres of private grounds with its own landscaped gardens and woodlands, lies Brailes Hill House. Complete with six bedrooms, five bathrooms and three ground floor living rooms, including 'The Oak Room,' so called because of its stunning reclaimed oak floor, this home has been successfully created by brothers Ivor and Martin Johnson to provide the perfect Cotswold lifestyle. A vast Shaker style kitchen at the heart of the property has timeless appeal, with its solid wood Edwin Loxley units painted in Farrow & Ball's Heritage Collection Great White. There are just three wall cupboards, with an extensive range of base units, and a highly functional 1.5m. L-shaped island providing ntial kbb